

Bug season

Bug season starts in May – black flies are reasonably good until the females hatch in late May. You will enjoy the screen tents because black flies are not sneaky like mosquitoes. Regular bug spray will keep them from biting, especially behind your ears. Long sleeves and pants can help.

In July, we get mosquitoes and deer flies. Black flies will reappear when the temperature is right, usually around dusk and dawn. Again, the screen tent is very handy. Bug spray is very helpful. You will find the bugs are ok when you are out in open areas, and during the hottest time of the day. Wear bug spray to avoid itchy bites.

In August, things are toning down a bit. Black flies are gone, deer flies are tapering off, and mosquitoes fall into the grass and disappear when it's too cool. Late August is perfect campfire weather.

We recommend bringing a pic for use in the screen tent. Please be careful of the zips and keep them closed to keep bugs out. Pics are super helpful, killing anything that gets inside.

April, early May, September, October, and November have no bugs!
